

Gilbert S. Seeley (1938-)

The presentation of choral music in Oregon changed when Gilbert Stewart Seeley arrived in 1974. "He has established a new standard of excellence in this region," wrote Jacob Avshalomov, director of the Portland Youth Philharmonic. Oregonian music critic David Stabler agreed, praising Seeley's "unsurpassed interpretation." Karen Kammerer of the Eugene Register-Guard wrote, "Known throughout the choral world for his extensive knowledge of choral literature, [Seeley] focuses on crossing cultural and international borders."

Seeley was born the youngest of three sons to Ralph and Ethel Stewart Seeley on June 9, 1938, in Evanston, Illinois. He attended school in Paw Paw, a suburb of Kalamazoo, Michigan. At Western State High School, he played tennis and was on the all-state basketball team. He learned to love music from his organist and piano-teacher mother. While still in high school, he won a national music competition in French horn, which allowed him to attend Interlochen Arts Camp, where he joined the choir and performed as a soloist.

In 1956, Seeley attended Wesleyan University before transferring to Oberlin Conservatory in 1958, where he studied voice with Robert Fountain, dean and director of singing and choral activities and later the choral conductor at University of Wisconsin-Madison. Seeley graduated from Oberlin with a bachelor of music degree in 1961 after spending a year in 1959-1960 at Mozarteum Academy of Music in Salzburg, Austria. From 1961 to 1969, he studied at the University of Southern California, where he earned master of music and doctor of musical arts degrees, with a thesis and dissertation on German choral music. One of his classmates was Royce Saltzman, the originator and executive director of the Oregon Bach Festival; his principal teachers were Charles Hirt and Ingolf Dahl, world-famous choral conductor and composer.

While in California, Seeley was director of music at a number of churches. He taught at the University of California, Santa Cruz (1967-1969), and assisted composer and conductor Carlos Chavez as director of the Cabrillo Music Summer Festival chorus in 1967-1970. He was director of choral music at the innovative California Institute of Arts in Valencia in 1970-1975. During the same years, he was assistant director of the Aspen Choral Institute, preparing choirs for conductor Helmuth Rilling, the artistic director of the Oregon Bach Festival, and directing the Aspen Chamber Choir.

In 1975, Seeley was named associate professor of music at Lewis & Clark College, where he was responsible for all choral activities. He taught conducting, music history, contemporary music, and a large class on world music. As a result, the college, according to James Bash, "has become... a focal point for world music in the Pacific Northwest." Seeley took the college choir on European tours in 1977 and 1982, led two terms in the college overseas program in Strasbourg, France, and was honored with the James Rogers Endowed Chair in Music in 1992. He retired in 2002.

Seeley has been the artistic director and conductor of the Oregon Repertory Singers since 1976. His frequent guest conducting has included the Roseburg, Lakeridge, Jefferson, and Lincoln High School choirs; All-state High School and Coast Valley League choral festivals; Eugene Symphony; Chamber Music Northwest; Portland Gay Men's Chorus; Portland Symphonic Choir; Portland Baroque Orchestra; Portland Youth Philharmonic; Oregon Bach Festival; Oregon Ballet; and Oregon Symphony. He received the Lewis & Clark College Community Treasure Award in 1999, the Aaron Copland Award for performing American music in 2002, and the Oregon Governor's Arts Award in 2007.

Written by Ulrich H. Hardt

Further Reading:

"Oregon Symphony Orchestra." Encore: Arts in Performance Magazine 14:1 (Sept. 23, 1984), 45-47.

Bash, James. "Behind the Baton: Gil Seeley." Sforzando (June 1996), 10-11.

Copyright © 2008-2014 Portland State University