L. D. L. proclaim that the Indian trader, the gold-digger, the traveller, the emigrant, the prospector, the farmer, and the hunter, and all who have an interest in the commercial and agricultural progress of the country, have been greatly instrumental in bringing about this important change. They will, therefore, be pleased to see the result of their efforts, and to participate in the prosperity of the country, which is so rapidly advancing under the stimulus of the new and improved system of taxation.

But let us not forget that there are still many obstacles to be overcome before we can hope to realize the full potentialities of this rich territory. The climate is still subject to abrupt changes, and the soil is not yet fully cultivated. It is necessary to continue to work hard and to be patient, until we can say that the region is completely tamed and brought under useful occupation.

In conclusion, I would urge upon all who are interested in the development of this territory, to continue their efforts, and to keep a close watch on the progress of the region. With perseverance and industry, we can make this the most prosperous and wealthy region in all the world.
