Colonel Wood Makes Arrests of Pamphlet Sellers Basis of Inquiry.

On June 21st, 1916, Colonel Wood made arrests of pamphlet sellers, which led to inquiries. The arrests were based on the moral or ridiculous nature of the pamphlets. The pamphlets contained various topics, including health and medical treatments.

The arrests were made to prevent the dissemination of false and misleading information. The pamphlets were sold in public clinics in France and Holland, and the arrests were made to ensure that pamphlets were not distributed in an area where they would be harmful to the community.

The arrests were met with some resistance, with pamphlet sellers arguing that they were not promoting harmful practices. However, the arrests were seen as necessary to prevent the spread of false and misleading information.

The incident highlights the importance of regulating the dissemination of information, especially in areas where it could be harmful. The arrests were a step towards ensuring that only accurate and reliable information is distributed to the public.
